Quidlibet

45ft Trad Stern

Built by Nick Thorpe

Price - £53,000 ono

This is a lovely narrowboat that has been lovingly outfitted and maintained by the current owner, with no expense spared. Unusually for this size of boat, it is fitted with a bath for that extra luxury.

Quidlibet is a 45' semi-trad stern built by Nick Thorpe in 2014 and fitted out by the current owner. The boat has been finished well and is in a great turnkey state. Externally, Quidlibet has been finished in a single coat of dark blue gloss paint, which, as you can see from the pictures, has been well maintained. Internally, it has been finished with white panelling and a T&G style roof, giving the internal cabin space a light and bright feel.

Starting at the Stern deck, you step down into the back cabin, which has been built with both storage and comfort in mind. The back space is both a practical room to fettle with the engine, batteries, or alike, as well as a comfortable, private, and spacious king-size fold-down bed. When the bed is down, there is loads of room underneath to store things such as bikes or boxes.

Moving forward into the bathroom, you will notice straight away that there is a full-size bath with a shower overhead. Usually, baths are impractical; however, the owner has thought of this with a 900-litre water tank and 90l calorifier, making a bath on a boat very possible indeed. There is still ample room for the sink and toilet, which, given the size of the boat, is proportionally huge.

Next, you will come to the galley kitchen, which has plenty of storage, creating ample countertop space. The galley gives you everything you need for cruising, with a practical induction hob and microwave, as well as a full-sized under-counter fridge and washing machine. Slightly further forward, we come to another set of shorter storage units with the top doubling up to become either bench seating on two single beds. There really is ample storage onboard.

Finally, we move to the Saloon, which gives a nice little space to sit down for an evening meal around the round table whilst looking out the beautiful front doors and well deck.

New professionally made curtains will be fitted for early spring.
